How does your agency handle closure?

- Think about a relationship ending you experienced...
- How was the ending (the relationship transition) handled by you and other person?
- How did it make you feel?
- What if anything could have made it more positive?

Handbook of Youth Mentoring

Termination and Closure of Mentoring Relationships

Authors:

- Renée Spencer
- Antoinette Basualdo-Delmonico

Renée Spencer

- Associate Professor, Boston University School of Social Work
- Research focuses on relational processes at work in more and less successful youth mentoring relationships
- Has published widely and work has been funded by William T. Grant Foundation, OJJDP, and Institute of Education Sciences (IES)

“This I Believe”

- Most, if not all, mentoring relationships end
 - 1/3 to 1/2 matches end prematurely
- How they end matters
- Most of us are pretty bad at saying goodbye
- Programs need to help mentors and youth end relationships well

Why Relationships End

- Changes in life circumstances
- Youth dissatisfaction
- Mentor dissatisfaction
 - Perceived lack of mentee motivation
 - Unfulfilled expectations
 - Inadequate agency support
- Gradual dissolution
- Mentor abandonment

(Spencer, 2007; Spencer et al, in press)

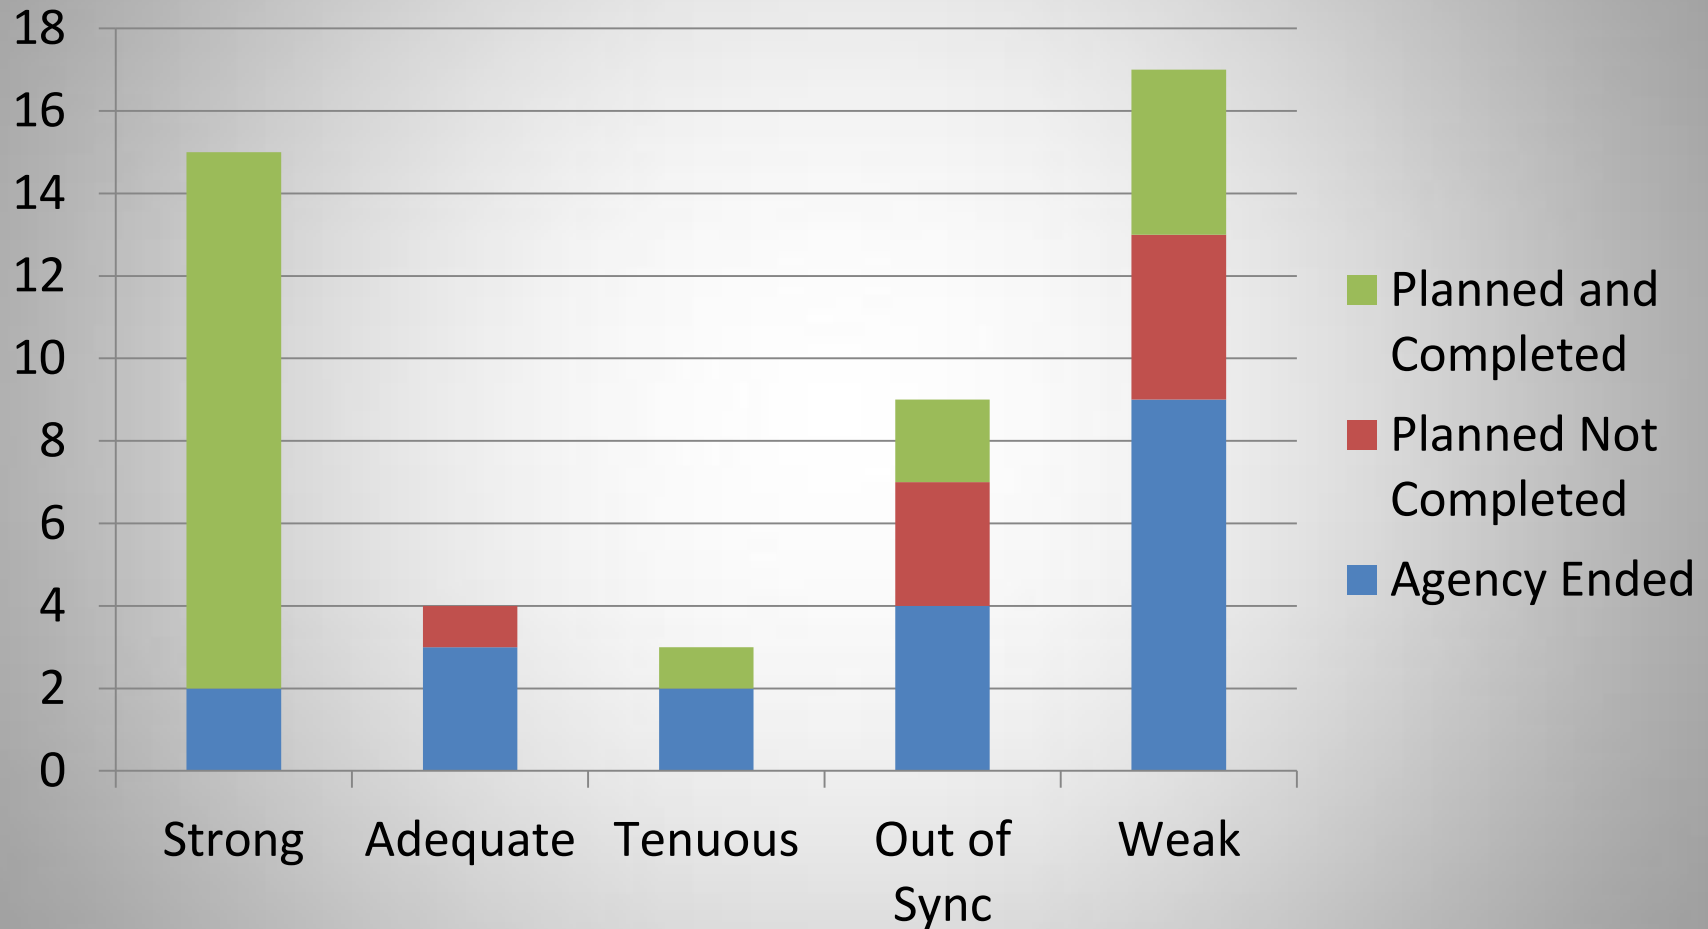

How Relationships End

Type of Ending	No. of Cases
Planned and Completed	20
Planned Not Completed	8
No Plan - Agency Ended	20

“I don’t think he likes me no more... Because he left without saying, he just left without calling.” (a youth)

“discouraged me from wanting to put him in a situation again not saying that another person would do the same thing.” (a parent)

Relationship Strength and Type of Ending

(Spencer et al., in press)

Impact of Match Endings

- Youth
 - Disappointment, sadness for lost opportunities, activities
 - Reticence about re-matching
 - Confusion
 - Left open-ended by mentor in attempt to minimize negative feelings
 - Wanted chance to say goodbye
- Parents/Guardians
 - Dissatisfaction, anger
 - Unfulfilled commitment
 - Wanted chance to say good-bye
 - Longed for clarity for child about ending
 - Concern about failed relationship for child
- Mentors
 - Disappointment, guilt, relief

(Spencer et al., in press)

Importance of Achieving Closure

- Finish what was started!
- Need to address both:
 - How relationships end (procedural endings)
 - Impact of endings – how people are left feeling about the ending
- Can influence how people feel about their overall experience participating in the program

But Hard to Do!

- Most of us are pretty bad at saying goodbye
 - More apt to say “see you around” rather than “good-bye”
- Avoidance
 - Most of us want to avoid pain and loss
 - Endings can dredge up past experiences of relationship ruptures and loss
 - Feelings of guilt, hurt, regret, etc. in present relationship
- Lack of modeling
- First Do No Harm

Relationship Endings

Decline

- Passive drifting apart
- Happens over time
- Levels of importance and closeness decrease

Dissolution

- Active
- Happens instantly/in a short amount of time
- Intentional ending

Timing of Closure

	Early Ending	Well-Timed Ending	Overdue Ending
Functional	Unexpected but Structured (unplanned, but completed ending) sadness, pensiveness	Expected and Structured (planned and completed ending) satisfaction, admiration	Delayed but Structured (unplanned, but agency completed ending) frustration, acceptance
Dysfunctional	Unexpected and Unstructured (unplanned and not completed ending) abandonment, fear, anger	Expected and Unstructured (planned and not completed ending) anticipation, confusion	Delayed and Unstructured (unplanned, and no agency completed ending) resentment, dissatisfaction

Considerations for Closing a Mentoring Relationship

- How relevant is the relationship to both parties?
- What is the quality of youth and adult interactions?
- What's the youth and adult's commitment to pre-established program expectations?

Scenario

A 10 year old boy from a single parent household has been matched with a 24 year old male mentor in your program for 6 months. The mentor was initially motivated to volunteer to learn more about working with kids.

- The pair meets fairly consistently, the mentor's re-scheduled twice.
- They generally spend time together playing basketball at the local community center.
- When the youth is asked how it's going with his mentor he says, "fine." Similarly, when the mentor is asked about the relationship's progress he states, "good I guess."
- On his way out of the community center last week you overheard the mentor say to another volunteer "I'm relieved to be half-way done with this."

Principles of Healthy Closure

1. Be clear & honest about the reasons for closure
2. Make it positive!
3. Develop appropriate and realistic plans for continued communication

Principle 1: Be Clear & Honest

- Be clear about the timeframe
 - gradual is better, but the date should be identified
- Identify natural emotions, like grief, denial, resentment, relief, or mixed feelings
- Allow time for reflection. Feelings will change over time so multiple conversations are ideal

Principle 2: Make it Positive

- Make the last meeting together special
- Affirm contributions of both the youth and adult
- Focus on the strengths of the relationship, particularly the strengths of the young person
- Cultivate a positive platform for both the youth and adult to move forward

Principle 3: Develop Appropriate & Realistic Plans for Continued Communication

- Recap reflections –what did & didn't work?
- Utilize appropriate closure/transition documents
 - Termination agreement for participants ending contact.
 - Continued contact agreements and support pacts for youth and adults continuing a natural relationship

Managing Healthy Closure

- Policy and procedures for anticipated and unanticipated closures
- Process for re-matching
- Tools & process for exit interviews
- Formal closure agreement / continued contact form

Closure in Varying Program Models

- School-Based –end of the year celebration
- Group –Final project, performance, expo
- Community-Based –varied based on the unique needs of participants

Innovations in Closure

- Karcher's 3,2,1 Reflection Activity

- 3 good things from today
- 2 things you did not enjoy
- 1 thing you might do differently in the future
