2019 SUMMIT HIGHLIGHTS

OPENING PLENARY
Americans agree: Mentoring is a systemic way to solve problems, bring people together, and address inequality. MENTOR CEO, David Shapiro, offered this uplifting message and a vision for what’s next for the mentoring movement. Young people from Baltimore-based Life Pieces to Masterpieces opened the Summit and attendees’ hearts with moving spoken word while partners including LinkedIn, Nike, and Starbucks highlighted how together we are driving equity—and the mentoring movement—through the power of relationships. From a youth performance to some of the world’s most recognizable brands, the kick-off session was a dynamic combination of performance and conversation.

MENTORING & YOUTH ACTIVISM
Young people standing up, stepping up, and elevating their voices are making headlines—and making change. Youth-led discussions offered diverse perspectives on the ways that mentoring can or should support civic engagement and youth activism. This session, featuring mentoring program founders, youth activists, and artists including Kwame Rose, Jessica Disu (FM Supreme), Aniya Wingate, and others offered a glimpse into the work of civically engaged youth and the mentors supporting them. The key takeaway: Young people are powerful changemakers.

THE MENTORING JOURNEY
As we continue to elevate mentoring in all its forms, we see how important showing up for another human being can be in changing someone’s life trajectory. Narrated by Disney Channel star Joshua Rush, this session focused on the key stages of a young person’s life from elementary school through high school to college and career. Through storytelling and vivid examples, speakers including a Middle School Principal of the Year, Liz Murray of the Arthur Project, and a duo of LinkedIn professionals who connected over shared experiences highlighted the moments where mentoring proved to be life-changing.

2019 EXCELLENCE IN MENTORING AWARDS
The 2019 Excellence in Mentoring Awards were held at the Library of Congress and honored individuals and organizations who have demonstrated a longstanding commitment to expanding quality mentoring for young people. This year, we spotlighted an Excellence in Mentoring Honoree in four distinct categories. Mayor Rahm Emanuel, City of Chicago (Public Elevation), Fred Skolnik, Certilman Balin (Corporate Leadership), Kenneth Ward, College Bound, Inc. (Lifetime Achievement), and Genentech (Impactful Philanthropy) represent the ingenuity, innovation, humility, and tireless commitment necessary to ensure all young people are met with supportive adult relationships.

THE SUMMIT FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM
Through the 2019 Summit Fellowship Program, MENTOR provided fifteen mentoring practitioners from programs with limited resources with professional development scholarships to attend this year’s National Mentoring Summit. The fifteen Fellows selected represent a diverse group of passionate mentoring practitioners whose programs serve a range of populations. Each Fellow exemplifies extraordinary leadership and the critical role mentoring plays in opening doors and breaking down barriers for young people.

CAPITOL HILL DAY
Capitol Hill Day brought the largest number of mentoring advocates to meet with Members of Congress and their staff to talk about the federal investment and policies that could help fuel the quantity and quality of mentoring relationships in every community in the nation. Nearly 500 advocates attended 270 meetings and represented over 40 states, DC, and Puerto Rico. U.S. Representative Ayanna Pressley (MA-07) provided remarks to the advocates at the annual Capitol Hill Day Kick-Off Breakfast and inspired them to believe in the power of their voices and actions. The relationships built with Members of Congress on Capitol Hill Day will allow advocates to work with congressional offices throughout the year on policy and legislation that positively impacts young people and communities.

SAVE THE DATE FOR THE 2020 NATIONAL MENTORING SUMMIT
January 29 – January 31, 2020 | #MentoringSummit | Renaissance Washington, DC Downtown
Each year MENTOR invites philanthropic leaders from across the country to join a specialized National Mentoring Summit track to network and learn alongside hundreds of mentoring practitioners, policymakers, researchers, and community leaders. Track attendees join influencers from across the philanthropic landscape for exclusive events and interactive workshops presented by leading investors in mentoring initiatives nationwide. Highlights from the 2019 Philanthropic Partnerships Track are included below:

A GROWING IMPACT

Since 2017, the Philanthropic Partnerships Track has featured dozens of innovative, cross-sector workshops and networking events which have helped to facilitate greater collaboration and idea sharing among the philanthropic community aimed at accelerating solutions to close the mentoring gap in our country. Workshops and events have featured thought leaders from national brands and foundations including AT&T, Bank of America, Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, EY, General Motors, Johnson & Johnson, LinkedIn, NBA, Nike, Oak Foundation, Raikes Foundation, Schultz Family Foundation and more. Additionally, hundreds of other philanthropic investors have participated in the track including the Annie E. Casey Foundation, Berkshire Partners, BP, Center for Effective Philanthropy, Cisco, Citi Foundation, Facebook, Google, Obama Foundation, Pfizer, T.Rowe Price, Toyota Motor North, and many others. Previous PPT participants have said...

"The National Mentoring Summit is an invaluable opportunity to meld minds with leading mentoring advocates, philanthropies, and corporations. What an incredible opportunity to continue building personal and organizational capacity, as well as to bridge the gap between aspiring mentors and unmentored youth."

- Sean Greenlee, Starbucks

"I appreciate the approach [MENTOR] took to both honor a distinct philanthropic path and space and create appropriate intersection with the direct service providers and [MENTOR]. This is how we get to the business of connecting the investment to the work and outcomes and build synergy among funders and those having an impact on youth. The content was rich, relevant, applicable, and engaging."

LinkedIn is proud to support the National Mentoring Summit and honored to be part of the mentoring movement. The MENTOR team is a pleasure to work with and the Summit serves as a critical way to connect with other corporations, foundations, and practitioners in the mentoring space.”

- Bari Saltman, LinkedIn

“ It was very inspiring to attend the 2019 National Mentoring Summit. The attendees are all committed to investing in the lives of others. As an exhibitor that offers consulting and training services on abuse prevention and the protection of mentors and mentees, I am impressed with the level of commitment and interest I heard from those in attendance. The event was well organized and there was ample opportunity to meet and engage with attendees.”
